Got a brand new roof above my head
All the empty boxes thrown away
I rearranged the place a hundred times today
But the ordering of objects couldn't hide what didn't stay

All these things
Should make me happy, make me happy
To be home again
All these things
Should make me happy, make me happy
To be alone again

Got myself a bottle of red wine
Got a night with nothing else to do
I think I might know what I really want
But a brighter discontent's the best I ever got from you

All these things
Should make me happy, make me happy
To be home again
All these things
Should make me happy, make me happy
To be alone again

Love is not these belongings that surround me
Though there's meaning in the memories they hold
A breaking heart in an empty apartment
Was the loudest sound I never heard unfold

Got a desk I'll write myself a note
Pretending that it came from you
On hotel stationary from the time we first met
Whatever I can do 'cause I won't throw my hands up yet

All these things
Should make me happy, make me happy
To be home again
All these things
Should make me happy, make me happy
To be alone again

All these things
Should make me happy, make me happy
To be home again
All these things
Should make me happy, make me happy
To be alone again
