I was wrong, I take it back Now can we get along? Give up the slack You know it all could be much easier But I'm still traveling, I'm still traveling

And all the while, the people talk About the unsung shit that they then stop And use to please the crowd, the swarming hordes of fun That was in in-turned glasses

So if I'm wrong again, I apologize You can take your guest, I'll take out my eyes It's a common thing to be out of line But it's getting old by the fifteenth time

Take your time, make up your mind Though it won't change the world, you'll be more inclined To have a point of view that makes it through And keeps you traveling, keeps you traveling

So pick your friends, forget the rest You can't live life being second best The critics talk of stubbornness But you're just passionate, you're just passionate

So if I'm wrong again, I apologize You can take your guest, I'll take out my eyes It's a common thing to be out of line But it's getting old by the fifteenth time

So if I'm wrong again, I apologize You can take your guest, I'll take out my eyes It's a common thing to be out of line But it's getting old by the fifteenth time

So if I'm wrong again, I apologize You can take your guest, I'll take out my eyes It's a common thing to be out of line But it's getting old by the fifteenth time So if I'm wrong again, I apologize You can take your guest, I'll take out my eyes It's a common thing to be out of line But it's getting old by the fifteenth time
