(Chorus) I'm on your side Dark days, cold nights This is what we're going through Keep holding on I can hear your cry I'm on your side Dark days, cold nights This is what we're going through Keep holding on It'll be alright It's just for now you could focus on the roses at your feet And all the poses that we keep Hold on frozen in a mental feature So when you sleep, the only messages that creep From the part of you that speaks Are the words that I am a gentle creature And maybe then, with our fingers like pens We could draw upon our skin holy images of matrimony But how and when, seem to come now and again From your brow to your chin, your confession is that we are lonely If we could only escape to the memories That take precious moments like these from a youthful heart I would hold you, and thank you for everything that makes you a blessing And see you for who you truly are (Chorus) I'm on your side Dark days, cold nights This is what we're going through Keep holding on I can hear your cry I'm on your side Dark days, cold nights This is what we're going through Keep holding on It'll be alright When what was, rings louder than what is I doubt there ever will be space for a new star And all of the cosmos, we focus on what costs most: Memories of pain and a new scar Well it's to those stars and underneath you The distance these loving arms would reach When you think I'm hard to find In a world without options You suddenly stopped by a stranger And find later that those arms are mine In a better time and place A feather of divine grace fades Into white parades of free birds Defined within their chase I find that I've been waiting my whole life Just to say these words (Chorus) I'm on your side Dark days, cold nights This is what we're going through Keep holding on I can hear your cry I'm on your side Dark days, cold nights This is what we're going through Keep holding on It'll be alright
