

Lyndsay Diaries, The "Where The Sidewalk Ends"

Visit "Where The Sidewalk Ends" on MotoLyrics.com songs of innocence play a sour tune you tune the dial, but the static still remains we fear the silence, so let's listen to the faceless name don't swing on my emotions and play off of my actions this isn't going to be another shot in the dark only another step closer to seperation

this isn't going to be another shot in the dark

i'm not going to run this race forever this has everything to do with what you said last night so ride the railroad that drives the nails and write it in your diary because this is better than a photograph

this isn't going to be another shot in the dark but only another step closer to seperation
this isn't going to be another shot in the dark

remember we couldn't remember it all ends here sometimes
it all ends here sometimes
remember we couldn't remember?
it all ends here sometimes

so let's sit back, tip the glass, and say those were the days because this is where the sidewalk ends this is where the sidewalk ends you're waving your hands goodbye please don't make me say the bitter words you're eaveing your hands goodbye This tears me apart...

Goodbye x 5

Visit Lyndsay Diaries, The page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.