00.35 walls closing in, suddenly dreams stop the nightmare begin her long hidden secret, she slaps te right into your face and you ask yourself questions about the truth of what she said and your knees get weak when the sun is down and your tears aren't dried when the dark has come

Then the vision they sometimes do creep inside your head no they won't let you sleep
no you just can't forget

Where do you go to
when you're lonely late at night?
Are you the only one
to come to talk about your fright?

And while she's lying in her bed and you hold her in your arms yea you're holding her tight, and you're keeping her warm the note that you still remains in your head ain't it funny that some things are never said and when your sun is down she'll habour the lies
when the dark has come

Still the visions they sometimes
do creep inside your head
no you just can't forget

when you're lonely late at night?
to come to talk about your fright?
