Here we are, spinning in circles again
We are young enough to think that we can But nobody is to blame, funny how things don't change at all
But I keep thinking maybe we'll be good someday

And we have to find a window with a different point of view
And we'll wake up here tomorrow expecting something new We'll all be thinking, "are we really thinking this through?"
This is just another chapter in the book of me and you

Yeah the book of me and you

I turn the page, thinking I can turn this around The page, every wall that said must come down Funny how it never does, trying to make it like it was on word
But I keep thinking time will make us strong enough

And we have to find a window with a different point of
And we'll wake up here tomorrow expecting something
We'll all be thinking, "are we really thinking this
through?"
This is just another chapter in the book of me and you

I keep on looking back and every place I go, seems you were there
It makes me laugh that we're still crashing into nothing
And I swear, we always wound up where we started Here we are

And we have to find a window with a different point of
And we'll wake up here tomorrow expecting something
We'll all be thinking, "are we really thinking this

through?"

This is just another chapter in the book of me and you

Yeah the book of me and you

Yeah the book of me and you

It's the book of me and you
