"Wide Awake"

Between the body count in my backyard and burials
beneath the stars,
I think someones catching on to me.
The neighbors have all seen the noose
and nickel's in my lovers eyes to seal this town's one last look goodbye.
Wide awake and I can say I've never seen someone sleep so still.
If I could keep you breathing you know
I would but you know too much and you know these days
the only thing we can't buy is trust.
Summer never stared so silently into these hills before you dropped out
of the sky into this town.
The only thing of mine you'll ever have again are my fingerprints
on the tender skin of your torn throat.
I'm wide awake and waiting for you.
