i got kissed by a turtle dove upon a cold Paris manger i was waking up to my love, first moment dawning danger everything was new

every sock and shoe
my face and your face tenderly renewed i awoke to find a whiteness inside everything did shine, slyly, from each body halos from within, diamonds the year in as we crossed to where the virgin mary moves over the fields

here and there, she kneels sighing sweet relief upon the prairie

everything was new

as the rich winds blow, kiss each flamingo, tussle reckless trains of the wild white horses and at night the owl streaks the field and howls she sees there's a kitten, stops wind aghast to hear them shudder

everything was new
