Sad eyes sink behind the horizon searching like they're trying to find someone they left here
long ago
an they can't see what we've all been missing I guess its no use to try to
just leave me here I dont wanna talk about those fake girls that dance like they know this something tells me that they want this so sit back and let the trade winds blow She doesnt know how life has landed her here
her day will end
and all that she wants is something to hold on to all she wants is someday to make this end

Seeing is believing when life is so unfair everybody wants to know "what you doing here?" nothin ever seems to work out for you in the end the sunset dip, jump, crash, and sparkle remembering the times that you just didnt wanna go home
go home
'cus youre not welcome
all she wants is someway
