Hey poverty
Did you know they're buying and selling
Love and hate on the black market?
Why don't you go to wreck it?

And she wakes up on the 13th floor
I hear they have a back room,
Where they're gonna fill you with pills until you choke
And he strokes his fingers through her dark hair

She said something about neutral,
Or was it comfort?
It was some kind of bull shit like that
That got him here in the first place.

Here's where he bleeds unnecessarily from the wreckage
And I know you can't see the wind, love
But you know how it blows you away from me
And you fall back on your own devices

There's a secret society that wants you
And only you to be a billboard that reads
"I'm the worst one-night-stand you'll ever have
'cause I get too attached."

Hey ingenious one
Did you know you're just a little girl
But you're still for sale in this free-world?

So speak to me in the third person,
'cause the first one is a liar
And the second one is wasted on power
And she'll devour you if you let her

And I just wanted you to hold my hand
I just wanted you to love me
So I could forget who I was for a little while Instead I sit here

Hey fucker

Did you know they're buying and selling
Hookers and guns on the stock market?
This is how you wreck it

And she's jumping off the 13th floor.
Could you call me when you're half way down
So I can wave goodbye
And watch as you fall down here?

Here's where you bleed unnecessarily from the wreckage
And no, you can't see the wind, love
But you know how it carries you away from me
And you fall back on your own devices

This is how it ends, don't you know?
