wakes up in the morning and puts on his clothes takes a step to the door turns the key and he goes takes a left at the light like he has for his whole working life same worthless job everyday nine to five with his nose to the grind just so he can survive if you look in his eyes you will see that he's barely alive we swore when we were kids that one day we would change the world but now where's our ambition gone? Get up and get out you gotta get out of here to save yourself you can be nowhere near small town is dragging us down and we're losing our minds Even at night everything is the same all the cool things have been done in so many ways so as if in a daze he drowns his mind out on too much TV the problem he has is it's so hard to grow in a place where change is incredibly slow if it happens at all it's too late for the problem to solve we swore when we were kids that one day we would change the world but now where's our ambition gone? get up and get out you gotta get outta here to save yourself you can be nowhere near small town is dragging us down and we're losing our minds get up and get out you gotta get outta here to save yourself you can be nowhere near small town is dragging us down and we're losing our minds.
