packing my bags and heading out on my own making choices that will shape the future days I have to come and I could choose the easy road but I have to be strong cause I don't want to spend a lifetime knowing that I've chosen wrong And it's so bittersweet these decisions I must make throwing one choice to the wolves for the other one I make and that itself seems wrong to me cause I am still so young how can I choose right when my life has just begun is it so bad to be unsure now woah ooo ooo age is supposed to clear things up but my future is fading out those who are older say my mind should be made up headed on some path to greatness but I think that's messed up cause there's so many options and I want to try them all but now for some strange reason my back's against the wall and it's so bittersweet these decisions I must make throwing one choice to the wolves for the other one I make and that itself seems wrong to me cause I am still so young how can I choose right when my life has just begun is it so bad to be unsure now woah ooo ooo age is supposed to clear things up but my future is fading out is it so bad to be unsure now whoa ooo ooo age is supposed to clear things up but my future is fading out.
