I watch the sun as it deceased across the desert sky I break the lies before they die inside the public eye the enemy of human life protects the youth in children for without them there is no air to breathe you'll soon forget about the differences that come between us
I stop to ask a question no one wants to wonder why I guess they're so content they know enough to get them by it seems that time has given life another chance tomorrow

the sounds we bring are for the world to sing if you believe what lies ahead is only in the future who stays unseen you can't see...falling down
the enemy of human life protects the youth in children
for without them there is no air to breathe
between us
