you leave the grass wobbly people in the yard making faces at the cars

you go inside subtle greetings to the stars and the girls climbing their arms you feel like laughing and sigh

automation
every weekend you restart
automation
you've known the scene since you where fifteen
automation
every racing summer heart
you know the scenes and play your part come - let the night embrace your thoughts

you sweep the crowd lonely people trying hard to conceal their lousy cards you sit and stare mary jane is kicking in and the room begins to spin

automation

automation in our daydream nation
