Those steps which seem to take a lifetime
When eyes just turn and stare
The day begins, collapsing without warning
You fade from sight, there's nothing there
All talk allowed, calls are answered daily
The questions are on your side
Deeply moved, beyond all consolation
You felt the pulse, now hear the cry
In my mind, thoughts are becoming clearer
I'm watching every move you make
Counting time spent in observation
A single blow a false mistake
Then you revealed to me
All that I need to know now
(The close went down to times too, too much behind us)
Then please don't turn away,
Why can't I talk to you now?
(The number of forgotten years
Where my honor isn't deepest
Grows the deepest feeling and it

Grieved for safety and despair)

There's nowhere left to go

Where is this taking her and how?

(The torish threats forevermore

Over our natural favor

And us and he's and I'll fall

Far in it, and it sees enough

In our failures and it's not time.)

There's nothing more I want

To know beyond your trust now

(I missed his promised time again

For my friend)

Don't throw our joy away

Why must you just you leave now?

(Has God forgotten to approach us?

Has He remembered to not despise us?)

Memories are all that's left

I need you near to me now

(There, now, now, don't come to mind my deeds

And call out in defiance of times gone by
