Every time you look at me like looking through a window
I can't help but stop and wonder why
And realise that something's wrong cos there no longer is no
No longer that twinkle in your eye

Hiding, hiding
From what we're unaware of
Hiding, hiding
From what no longer is love
Cos you've lost that twinkle in your eye

Have you thought of the force it takes for such a heavy burden?
Lying to yourself that all's not gone
Hoping time will finally repair what has been broken
And so we insist to carry on

Hiding, hiding
From what we're unaware of
Lying, lying
But to ourselves only
Hiding, hiding
From what no longer is love
Lying, lying
So scared of staying lonely
So insist to give it one more try
Though you've lost that twinkle in your eye

Could you ever try to feel my hope to hear my prayer?
Put behind the grieves that are no longer Take another good look 'round the life we've had together
And think of what's left to discover

Hiding, hiding
From what we're unaware of
Hiding, hiding
From what no longer is love
Cos you've lost that twinkle in your eye
