when the winter was over she returned there to find him and her memories filled her with light she remembered the beauty she remembered desires
and her memories filled her with light
i am the sun in the flame cold from the flame turns away and in these winds came a change she awakes... sister walk through these fields of delight but I want you to know desperation's the tenderest trap so gently you go
what will it take
sister awake
when this beautiful cult of desire has left you for dead isolation will cradle the lies of things left unsaid
what will it take

and you'll look to the heavens above and taste it's deceit

these temptations have blinded desires to sleep at their feet

and you'll hear them call out your name invoking the fates chances are you've travelled too far in stirring their hate

awake
