"in a forgotten place, a child's face old beyond her years
her body caged, my soul enraged she's drowning in her tears though they may deny you (and i know they'll try to) i cannot help but wonder will no one help her?

a china doll, but less alive her time in this world her only crime the same as mine to have been born a girl better i should suffer than to watch another one so small can do no wrong child -- where's your mother? oh, mother

can no one tell me how a mother can give away her own?
cast aside, left to die all alone

can no one tell me how a person can say that this is right? all the guilt, shame, blame do you sleep at night?

can no one tell me the purpose of being born only to die little children, angels hear them cry

i'm drowning in my tears they say the blame is thought to be a one-child policy but you were sent to the dying room

Mei-Ming, i'm so sorry

i'm sorry "
