Easy to stumble, harder to fall
Easy to bow to the flag on the wall
I pledge my allegiance to nothing at all

And on the news they said the world has changed
But you and I are staying home again
And even though we're scared
Everything's the same, everything's the same

You wanted marriage, you wanted fame
You wanted an hyphen after your name
They put it in neon but nobody came

And on the news they said the world has changed
But you and I are staying home again
And even though we're scared
Everything's the same

I know you were in the air while I was below
Fourteenth street with moondust in my air
Do you know how it's going to end?
Underneath the table with your friend

And on the news they said the world has changed
But you and I are staying home again
And even though we're scared
Everything's the same, everything's the same
