A single mother with two children
Makes lunches in the morning
And on her way to work she drops them off at school
And tells them, "Faith in me, faith in you"

A farmer kneels in his fields with dust
Running through his fingers
Says, "I'm gonna lose you if it don't rain real soon"
He looks up and says, "Faith in me, faith in you"

Oh, I have to have faith
That's where it all starts
I know I have to have faith in myself
It's free and it's found right here in my heart

And when I think about things and all the dreams I wanna see come true
Let me tell you just what I do
I take a look in the mirror and I smile and say
"Have faith in me, faith in you"

In the shadows of the city
By the banks of the river
From the doorway of his cardboard room
A man cries out, "Faith in me, faith in you"

Before the poverty and prejudice
All the hunger and pain
And the social injustice, just watch the boss' reign
Here 'em sing, "Faith in me, faith in you"

Oh, I have to have faith
That's where it all starts
I know I have to have faith in myself
It's free, it's found right here in my heart

When I think about things and all the dreams I wanna see come true
Let me tell you just what I do
I take a look in the mirror and I smile and say
"Have faith in me, faith in you"

I take a look in the mirror and I smile and say
"Have faith in me, faith in you"
