sung by Rammstein

You see him creeping around the church.
He's been alone for a year.
Sorrow took all his senses.
Sleeps every night beside her stone.

There by the bells there sleeps a stone.
Iâ€™m the only one who can read it.
And on the fence the red cock
Who once has been your heart.

Fear speared on this fence
I go digging every night
To see what remained
>From the face that smiled for me.

There by the bells Iâ€™m spending
the night
There among snails a lonely animal.
During the day I run after the night.
You escape me for the second time.

Marry me.

Iâ€™m digging deep with my hands.
To find what I missed so much.
And the moon in its most beautiful dress
Iâ€™ve kissed your cold lips.

I embrace you tenderly
But your skin rips like paper
And parts are falling off of you.

You escape me for the second
time.

There by the bells Iâ€™m spending
the night

There amongst snails a lonely
animal.

During the day I run after the night.

You escape me for the second time.

(the following part in parenthesis is on the soundtrack edited!)

(So I take what remained of you

The night is cold

And we are naked

To curse the cock greets the morning

Iâ€™ve hacked off his head
