

Mourning Maxwell

"I'm Sorry, Me"

Visit "I'm Sorry, Me" on MotoLyrics.com

Throw your stereo out the window
You've heard this one before//
Breaking habits as they form around you
Are better pieced apart than torn///
When all I ever do is analyze the thoughts that scream
inside my head//
When killing time and breathing walk the same line
We'll keep in locked under my bed//
If we focus on what could have been
That's all we'll ever be//
This conversation is nauseating me.

Chasing your shadow wasn't what I had in mind//
I told you from the start I wouldn't waste your time//
If this is all you see my god you've got the best of me//
And you've got mine so I think we're fine.

She speaks to me in solitude of lonely nights
With skies I thought could never seem so red//
A fire breathing sight that stretched horizon lines
Burning bridges as she fled//
Just because you're breathing doesn't mean that you're alive//
It's cold enough we might as well ignite.

I'm not about to change
But I still think we could make this one last forever.

I've arrived at what is thought to be despair//
Well make it last because we'll soon be out of air//
We're alive so let's never blame fear.

Visit Mourning Maxwell page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.