Smile for me, just one more time

Before I forget a word to rhyme with smile

Let the air around you be

Don't touch this silence and you'll see the world slow down in silence for a while.

Just feel the noise, it feels so near

Sow the frown and plant a tear

And in the spring, when summer comes

You realize forgetting is what numbs feelings that have caused you this denial

Say this smile is not yours to give,

Don't tell me that's the way you live.

So you touch the silence with your hand

you hold your world like a grain of sand

Smile, child, and see time stand still

Smile, child, It's such a thrill

Smile

Time's not on your side

It never was, the people lied.

And in the morning, when I wake,
I pray a prayer for prayings sake
Don't tell me that to pray is wrong
I sing my life and it's not your song
Don't tell me that to feel is old
I know you feel that I'm too bold
In the night, with eyes so starry
Time had his fun and is not sorry
So why not have your fun with me now too?
Say this smile is not yours to give,
Say it's not your life to live.
So you touch the silence with your hand
you hold your world like a grain of sand
Smile, child, and see time stand still
Smile, child, It's such a thrill
Smile
Cut me with your eyes and penetrate my soul
Fill my holy faith with another hole
Kindly break my spirit, dear
When I asked you to listen, you did not hear.
You touched the silence and the world flew by
To plant a tear. . . you need to cry
