He was a young man, his life just begun but never felt young His parents hurt him, and stole his childhood beat it out of his young mind Dad was a veteran and alcoholic and so violent Mother just sat there watching the TV her only words hate she paid no notice to him he couldn't love her if she died he wouldn't care
So now he's so cold with no emotion
And no one matters
All that he can feel, merely physical he thinks that is emotion

(He feels nothing)

Day to day lusting after flesh
Feeling satisfied with penetration

All the girls in his mind Fantasy merely postpones his wrath Acting out, soon follows Walking dead women waiting to die

Fingernails embedded deep into flesh Straddling his body gyrating slowly Soft hair flows over ripe breasts swaying gently

Her screams of ecstasy, not fear this time

Digging through her garbage, searching for something Picking through remnants of her daily patterns

Discarded tampon, telephone bill stub, last night's dinner
His heart growing fonder with every load he takes

Dreaming of what is to come for this girl Her broken ripped flesh, swollen on his penis

Upon his discovery of her depressive state of existence....her sorrow His attention to her growing stronger, more obsessive....she's his

His collection now nearing completion
He knows everything
His parents are blamed, his misperception
They created his problems
His mind is feeble, like a rape-machine Sex is what drives him
His first is special, and so beautiful
She doesn't know what's coming.....
