"Half Life"

half life wastes before it goes it's funny how your bee sting touch never leaves me whole

it's not enough to stay here almost trying you keep your last laugh watch this dying it's just your half time vertigo and if you want an answer i don't know if you had completed me don't think i'd be pleased with you don't think i'd compete with you with half of me to take half life nothing i'd call home it's lucky how these phantom limb bee stings never show

it's not enough to leave this falling kindly you burn my star down twice as brightly it's just your half light undertow but if you need forgiveness i don't know half light breaks with nothing wrong just a corner of my bed where you don't belong it's kind of you to notice no-one's dying you choked your last laugh almost crying it's just your half life long to know and if you need a reason so it goes
