all over town
the flat chested trailor brides their braces and their bottle caps jangle like tambourines triangle flags in a car dealer parking lot aprons on clothes lines from barbeque restaurants and i know your mom's got a half pack of cigarettes and one of them's light and the other nine wait for it somewhere an arrow is flashing directionless over hotels of husbands and infidels but i'm in the backyard burning leaves in a barrel for the prettiest girl in all of the motor court
