referring to the wrinkle bus schedule you keep on your living room floor i noticed the last 43 passed 10 minutes ago as i make up my mind to take the long walk home something reminds me of 1778 out among the frontlines they're dying for our asses someone read a prayer or poem before it's too late we're sharpening our bayonets on the first of the season as a ragged crew assembles in a green mountain state la la la la la la la la la la la la la

we'll hide beneath the canopy from well-trained arrows as i log in cacography to the journal that i've kept and the last drop of liquor turns a fraud as i honest and big trucks are piling in the new fallen snow their greasy gears seizing in the clean, quiet snow.
