there's water on the wood and sails are tight and good but something's drifting aimlessly this one has come unchained i was vicious

i was weak
i was trying to be opaque it soon became so obvious the advantage i had taken but you kept me on as friend knowing it was bound to end proving once again it was me who'd come unchained so if you must know the truth you're the only one who knew that everything must come undone before it can be chained now carmen's lines are cutting out and caesar's loosing cleo but tired knots were slipping soon to be unchained
